

These lectures will describe issues that are faced in the study of non-vacuum systems in General Relativity. They will concentrate on discussing mathematical, physical and computational aspects contrasting them with the vacuum case. We will also highlight main results and opportunities (as well as challenges) for future research of non-vacuum systems.